Item 8.01 Other Events

On January 28, 2013, Eastman Kodak Company (“Kodak” or the “Company”) commenced a process to seek consents from the lenders under its existing Debtor-in-Possession Credit Agreement, dated as of January 20, 2012 (as amended, the “DIP Credit Agreement”), to two amendments. The first amendment would extend the covenant requirement under the DIP Credit Agreement for when the Company is required to file a chapter 11 plan and disclosure statement with the United States Bankruptcy Court for the Southern District of New York (the “Bankruptcy Court”) from February 15, 2013 to April 30, 2013, in light of the Company’s previously announced junior debtor-in-possession facility, which was approved by the Bankruptcy Court on January 24, 2013 (the “Junior DIP Financing”). The second amendment is designed to permit the incurrence of the Junior DIP Financing and make a number of related changes, and would become effective upon the closing of the Junior DIP Financing, subject to the term loans under the existing DIP Credit Agreement having been paid in full. This second amendment would, among other things, (i) extend the maturity date of the facility from July 20, 2013 to September 30, 2013, to match the maturity of the Junior DIP Financing, (ii) eliminate the Canadian revolving facility, which is not being used by the Company, and reduce the aggregate amount of the US revolving credit commitments from $225,000,000 to $200,000,000, (iii) remove machinery and equipment from the borrowing base of the revolving facility and (iv) revise the existing financial covenants and modify other covenants to match the terms agreed for the Junior DIP Facility. The first amendment is subject to approval by a majority of the existing revolving and term loan lenders under the DIP Credit Agreement. The second amendment is subject to approval by the existing revolving lenders under the DIP Credit Agreement, as the term loans under the existing DIP Credit Agreement will be fully repaid at closing of the Junior DIP Financing and effectiveness of the second amendment. There is no assurance that Kodak will receive the relevant consents to approve any of these amendments. Additionally, Kodak may amend, modify, eliminate or change the amendments that it is seeking consents from its lenders to approve. The amendments, if any, that are ultimately adopted may differ from the amendments summarized above.

Additionally, Kodak currently expects to consummate the transactions contemplated by the Patent Sale Agreement, dated December 18, 2012, between Kodak and Intellectual Ventures Fund 83 LLC on or about February 1, 2013 (the “Patent Transaction”). Pursuant to the terms of the DIP Credit Agreement, at the closing of the Patent Transaction, Kodak will apply 100% of the net cash proceeds from the sale of the patents and 75% of the net cash proceeds from licensing certain patents to repay amounts outstanding under the term loan facility under the existing DIP Credit Agreement. As a result, Kodak expects to pay $418.7 million of such net cash proceeds to repay the existing term loans and to retain $108.3 million of such net cash proceeds, pending closing of the Junior DIP Financing, when the remaining balance outstanding under the existing term loans will be repaid.
